

EXPLANATION OF PLATE XII.

SUSPENSION OF THAIS.

Three several figures of the larvæ of different individuals suspended for change to pupa to show (which the smallest specimen does most successfully) the position of the "girth" at this stage, and three of pupa, the first with the girth in the Papilio position it occupies during the first twenty-four hours after moult, the other two with it in the well-known Thais position attached to the nose-horn.
